The third is of the Sun, on the 15th Day of August, about 4 o'Clock in the Morning, invisible.

The fourth is of the Moon, on the 30th of August, visible; as follows:

	H.	M.

PLUTARCH's motive for fixing his retirement at Chæronea, is worth observing: "I was born, says he, in a very small city, and to prevent it from being smaller, I choose to remain in it."

ISOCRATES, being at table with NICOERSON, King of Cyprus, was pressed to talk, and supply matter for conversation, which he persisted in refusing, saying "What I do know, does not suit this place, and what would suit it, I don't know."

When LEWIS the XIIth. of France, was on the throne, one of his courtiers joyfully told him, "Sir, you have now the power to be reveng'd of your enemies:" "No, no, answered this generous Prince, it is not for a King of France to remember the injuries offered to a Duke of Orleans."

It is best to be with them in time, that we would live with in eternity.

JANUARY. The FIRST MONTH.

To the MEMORY of M. MASON, who died at the Hot Wells in Bristol, 1767, by her husband.

TAKE, holy earth, all that my soul holds dear;
Take that blest gift which Heav'n so lately gave:
To Bristol's fount I bore with trembling care

Her faded form:—She bow'd to taste the wave,
And died!—Does youth, does beauty read the line?
Does sympathetick fear their breasts alarm?

PUNISHMENTS.

POWER and superiority are so flattering and delightful, that scarcely any virtue is so cautious, or any prudence so timorous as to decline them.

From the same principle, tending yet more to degeneracy and corruption, proceeds the desire of investing lawful authority with terror, and governing by force rather than persuasion: Pride being unwilling to believe the necessity of assigning any other reason than her own will.

It may, I think, be suspected that this political pride has sometimes found its way into legislative assemblies, and mingled with deliberations upon property and life.

A slight perusal of the laws by which the measure of vindictive and coercive justice is established, will discover so many disproportions between crimes and punishments, such capricious distinctions of guilt, and such confusion of remissness and severity as can scarcely be believed to have been produced by publick wisdom, sincerely and calmly studious of publick happiness

FEBRUARY. The SECOND MONTH.

Speak, dead Maria! breathe a strain divine;

E'en from the grave thou shalt have pow'r to charm.
Bid them be chaste, be innocent like thee;

Bid them in duty's sphere as meekly move:
And if so fair, from vanity as free;

As firm in friendship, and as fond in love—
Tell them, tho' 'tis an awful thing to die,

('Twas e'en to thee) yet, the dread path once trod,
Heav'n lifts her everlasting portals high,

And bids the pure in heart behold their God.

Her conversation more endears
 As side by side they rove,
 Each day some new-born grace appears,
 Each day confirms his love.

Eden he deems no more as waste,
 Each shrub now breathes perfume,
 The fruits produce a richer taste,
 The flowers a fairer bloom.

THE prætor had given up to the triumvir, a woman of some rank, condemned for a capital crime, to be executed in the prison. He, who had charge of the execution, in consideration of her birth, did not immediately put her to death. He even ventured to let her daughter have access to her in prison; carefully searching her, however, as she went in, lest she should carry with her any sustenance; concluding that, in a few days, the mother must, of course, perish for want, and that the severity of putting a woman of family to a violent death, by the hand of the executioner, might thus be avoided. Some days passing in this manner, the triumvir begun to wonder that the daughter still came to visit her

SEPTEMBER. The NINTH MONTH

From Mr. POPE's Temple of Fame.

A Troop came next, who crowns and armour wore,
And proud defiance in their looks they bore.
For thee (they cry'd) amidst alarms and strife,
We sail'd in tempests down the stream of life;
For thee whole nations fill'd with fire and blood,
And swarm to empire through the purple flood.
Those ills, we dar'd, thy inspiration own;
What virtue seem'd, was done for thee alone."

OCTOBER. The TENTH MONTH.

"Ambitious fools!" (the queen reply'd and trown'd)
 "Be all your deeds in dark oblivion drown'd.
 "There sleep forgot with mighty tyrants gone;
 "Your statues moulder'd, and your names unknown."
 A sudden cloud straight snatch'd them from my sight,
 And each majestick phantom sunk in night.
 Then came the smallest tribe I yet had seen;
 Plain was their dress, and modest was their mien.

' Great idol of mankind ! We neither claim
 ' The praise of merit, nor aspire to fame ;
 " But safe in deserts from th' applause of men,
 ' Would die unhear'd of, as we liv'd unseen.

 " Those acts of goodness, which themselves requite.
 ' O let us still the secret joy partake,
 ' To follow virtue ev'n for virtue's sake."
 " And live there men, who slight immortal fame ?

E

DECEMBER. The Twelfth MONTH.

“ But, mortals ! know, ’tis still our greatest pride
 “ To blaze those virtues, which the good would hide.
 “ Rise, Muses ! Rise ! Add all your tuneful breath,
 “ These must not sleep in darkness, and in death.”
 She said. In air the trembling musick floats,
 And on the winds triumphant swell the notes ;
 So soft, tho’ high ; so loud, and yet so clear ;
 Ev’n list’ning angels lean from heav’n to hear.

To farthest shores th' ambrosial spirit flies,
Sweet to the world, and grateful to the skies.

While thus I stood intent to see and hear,
One came, methought, and whisper'd in my ear;
"What could thus high thy rash ambition raise?"
"Art thou, fond youth! a candidate for praise?"
'Tis true, said I, not void of hopes I come;
For who so fond, as youthful bards, of fame?
But few, alas! the casual blessing boast,
So hard to gain, so easy to be lost.
How vain that second life in other's breath,
Th' estate, which wits inherit—after death.
Ease, health, and life, for this they must resign,
Unsure the tenure, and how vast the fine!)
The great man's curse, without the gains endure,
Tho' wretched flatter'd, and tho' envy'd, poor.
All luckless wits their enemies profess,
And all successful, jealous friends at best.
Nor fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
She comes unlook'd for, if she comes at all.
But if the purchase costs so dear a price,
As soothing folly, or exalting vice.
And if the Muse must flatter lawless sway,
And follow still, where fortune leads the way;
Or if no basis bear my rising name,
But the fall'n ruins of another's fame,
Then teach me, heav'n, to scorn the guilty bays,
Drive from my breast that wretched lust of praise.
Unblemish'd let me live, or die unknown;
O grant me honest fame; or grant me none.

To cure the Itch. The best medicine yet known for the Itch is sulphur, which ought to be used externally and internally. The parts affected may be rubbed with an Ointment made of flour of sulphur two ounces, crude sal ammoniac, finely powdered, two drams; hogs lard four ounces; half a dram of the essence of lemon. About the bulk of a nutmeg may be rubbed upon the extremities, at bed-time, thrice a week.

O N D E A T H.

DEATH, like a torrent, sweeps away
The aged and the youth;
This is the place, and this the day
Declares the awful truth.
How many flow'rs, alas! has death
Destroyed in the bud;
His quiver took their vital breath,
And sent them unto God.
The blooming youth, the rosy fair,
Could not escape his dart.
At what uncertainty we are,
When we shall hence depart!

As death us finds we must remain
 To all ETERNITY,
 In endless joy, or endless pain;
 Our state then fix'd will be.
 Then let me now, while time and space,
 And health and strength are giv'n,
 Secure, through the redeemer's grace,
 Eternal bliss in heav'n.
